Alrighty – this is super simple, easy, and..... it works beautifully! Tutorial start to finish INCLUDING drying time took me less than an hour....

Supplies:

A victim
A bottle of good ole white glue
A toothpick
Paint.

Dip your toothpick in your glue – let it ‘drop’ onto your victim (IN the appropriate place please, and, no, irregardless of what rubber doll manufacturer’s would have you believe – said place is NOT at the tip of her ‘cone’ – it’s slightly above.)

Repeat on the other side... TRY to get them even.
What you’re doing at this point is forming the Areola .

Let dry completely.

Step 2:

Do exactly the same thing, with about ½ the amount of glue, dropped into the center of the dried glue circles you’ve already got:

Let dry – and – POOF – you have a lovely raised nipple! (well, hopefully you have a PAIR....
:grin:)

Step 3: mix your paint!

You want to compliment her skin-tone and hair... my girl is fairly pinkish, but has dark auburn hair – so I'm going for a dusty rose...

This color mix isn't gonna show up correctly on your puter, I guarantee it, it doesn't look right on MINE after I did all I could to fix the color scheme – but it's a 'brick red' and a 'pale portrait pink' – one drop of each. – that turned out a tad too pink for what I wanted, so I added some cadmium yellow to the mix....

I used this mix, plus some of the straight brick red... and did this:

Painted the whole thing in the 'base' color – put ½ circles of the brick red around the base of the nipple and 'dots' of it around the edge of the areola....

Have fun!
