

Let's give her a spiked hairstyle shall we?

First things first.... Supplies!

You'll want a tail comb – if you have a wire-tailed tail comb, so much the better – if not I recommend having a large pin or needle on hand.

A sharp, short, pointy pair of scissors

If you have a clamp USE IT – doing this without one (especially while trying to take pics! LOL) is difficult. (I can't seem to find mine... sigh)

Things to hold the hair with – you can use hair clippies, or bobby pins, I like to wrap it in pipe cleaners – fast, easy, effective.

Water bottle

Heavy duty gel

Pot of boiling water

Hair dryer

SO section off the hair into three parts.... Ear to ear across the top, across the middle, and comb the rest straight down... it'll look something like this:

Angle your scissors facing up and jaggedly cut the ends into a tapered "V" like so.

Let your second section down and comb it straight. Take vertical 1/4" parts, comb them straight out from the head and then jaggedly cut them perpendicular to the floor.

Ready for the tough bit? LOL (I'm teasing)
Take your front section, comb it straight up and jaggedly cut it straight across (kinda, sorta, do NOT worry if you muck it up)

Alrighty – take the center very ‘top’ bit of the section you just cut, and cut it about $\frac{1}{2}$ ” shorter, about a finger width up from the head, in other words. Combed straight up the three sections should end up looking like this.

Do the $\frac{1}{4}$ ” parts again and trim off the corners. Like so:

Alrighty then! – we have a haircut!
– isn't she purty? (well..... no.)

Take the poor soul out to the kitchen and your handy dandy pot of boiling water – swish her around upside down for 10 seconds or so, run her under cold water, squeeze her real good with a towel and head back to all your goodies...

Remember that hair gel? – coat her up! (just the short bits really, you don't REALLY need to coat up the long pieces)

Plug in your blow dryer, and go to town! Grin – (rub the hair around in little circles, pull pieces out, comb pieces forward or back or up or down.... Whatever it takes?)

Until she looks something vaguely sorta-kinda like this. Guaranteed no two dolls will actually look the same? LOL
